Createspace, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Juanita Jones Neff (illustrator). 216 x 140 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Newly minted lawyer, Tina Willet, held many different jobs during her struggle to put herself through college and law school. Now she finds spending her summers as a landman, securing leases for prospective oil companies, is an asset nothing else could have given her for the plans she has for her future. She wants to practice law in Denver with a firm emphasizing environmental law. The firm where she has been clerking during school terms has offered to keep her on, even though she had been arrested for attracting the attention of the authorities during a protest against gene modified grains. It was her misfortune to be handcuffed and taken to the police station. Her mug shot was picked up by reporters and the whole riotous event went viral. Unfortunately, the name of her law firm was included in the story and the firm immediately became the target of a torrent of emails, either berating her involvement in the protest, or supporting her passion for the anti frankenfood movement. Instead of firing her, her superiors took advantage of her notoriety and immediately brought her to the forefront of the courtroom, albeit in a small secretarial role, while they tried a case suing GMO corporations for supposedly allowing rogue seed to escape onto neighboring farms. The firm won the case, with the offending companies paying large penalties for breaking the Federal Patent Seed regulations and the affected farmers also receiving significant amounts in damages. The trial over, Tina was assigned to sort through the stored emails and secure for future reference anything that might be of use in future GMO cases. Among the emails was...
