It aims at the most methodical arrangement the clearest expositions the best elementary exercises, and the most varied and useful applications: - in all these respects presenting some new features, which have been adopted as improvements in the method of teaching this science. All that is appropriate to an Algebraic treatise in a general course of mathematical studies, or necessary in preparation for the higher works of the course, has been introduced, with the exception of a few subjects which are more exclusively preliminary to the Differential and Integral Calculus. These, with whatever else may be considered useful in a larger work, will shortly be added to the present treatise. Between this work and the authors Arithmetic there will be found a mutual correspondence in many respects, though each is entirely complete in itself The two are commended to the consideration of Teachers of Mathematics, and the Guardians and Friends of Education, as containing a practicable, progressive, and thorough course of study, for Schools, on these connected and important branches of science.
