Createspace, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.In response to an unfavorable review for Confessions of a Barbarian, George Sylvester Viereck writes to the Editor of The Independent: Sir: It is not my habit to reply to reviewers. In the twenty-five years of my young life so many vials of ink have been poured upon my innocent head that I am somewhat impervious to either praise or blame. But I frankly admit that I am sorry that your magazine should have been the one to print so stupidly inadequate and imbecile a notice of my Confessions of a Barbarian, as it did in its issue of July 28. I have now published four books in two languages in three countries. I have a certain standing as a writer, as an editor and as a playwright; and it seems to me that I am entitled to criticism, not to the badinage of a schoolboy. I would not object to an unfavorable review; but I think that you as the editor, should have protected me from drivel so inane, futile and hackneyed, written presumably by some preposterous nobody. Good God! Literature in this country must be chiefly its own reward. This book of mine happens to be the bestselling non-fiction book in New York City. It happens to have been published in two languages. This fall John Lane will bring out an edition in England. The Ambassador of the United States, Dr. David Jayne Hill, has presented a copy of the book to the Kaiser. I have touched on many serious problems. I admit that I have written brilliantly; and it has always been characteristic of dull minds to suspect brilliancy of shallowness. Most people, especially amateur...
